Overview. Boston Women’s Fund (BWF), a progressive foundation that supports community-based grassroots initiatives run by womxn and girls in order to create a society based on racial, economic and social justice, is seeking a new Executive Director. The Board of Directors is looking for a savvy and dynamic executive with experience leading mission-driven organizations. The new Director will bring a demonstrated understanding and commitment to supporting and sustaining community-based grassroots organizations and experience working in philanthropy supporting multi-cultural, racial, gender-respecting, diverse organizations.

The ideal candidate will exhibit exceptional communication skills and the ability to serve as the Fund’s lead spokesperson and ambassador. They will demonstrate an ability to build on existing and generate new relationships as we seek to elevate and grow the Fund’s impact. With strong management skills and an inclusive leadership style, they will inspire and develop a small staff to build BWF’s capacity and capabilities in support of its important mission. Building on a strong legacy, the new Director will have both the opportunity and the challenge of seeing BWF into its next phase: growing the organization’s grantmaking and operations, developing the Board, and successfully competing for philanthropic funds on behalf of grassroots organizations.

The Organization. Founded in 1984 by a diverse group of womxn, BWF was the first womxn’s organization in Massachusetts with a philanthropic focus of supporting grassroots womxn’s organizations. It is unique both in its creation, development, priorities and the place it fills within the philanthropic landscape of greater Boston. As a result, BWF has been a leader in supporting grassroots efforts led by diverse womxn and girls with the least access to resources working in their communities to address social racial and economic justice. BWF believes that womxn and girls working with community-based organizations are best positioned to propose solutions to challenges facing their families and communities. BWF’s goal was, and continues to be, an organization ‘for womxn by womxn’.
Diversity and inclusion are critical core values of BWF and are an integral part of all its endeavors, including staffing, fundraising, and especially grant making. BWF is a trailblazer and role model for philanthropy in how to embrace and use participatory grantmaking as its modus operandi. In its 36 years, BWF has awarded grants to more than 340 organizations with an investment of nearly $6.5M using participatory- and trust-based grantmaking methods.

BWF believes that engaging a diverse donor base is fundamental to its mission and values and necessary in supporting successful and sustained social justice movements and grassroots efforts. BWF was an early adopter of giving circles, starting one of the first giving circles devoted to supporting grassroots and womxn of color organizations. In 2000, BWF demonstrated its commitment to respecting a diverse donor base when it raised over $1.2M for a permanently restricted endowment from an economically diverse donor base with gifts as small as $500 paid over many years.

This core value of diversity and inclusion, in all aspects of BWF, continues to be central to BWF’s work as it expands alliances and collaborations in its effort to increase support of grassroots womxn and girls’ organizations.

Mission. BWF is a progressive foundation that supports community-based grassroots initiatives run by womxn and girls in order to create a society based on racial, economic and social justice.

Vision. We strive for a world free of racism, poverty, sexism, and other oppressions.

Values. The Boston Women’s Fund believes that change begins at the grassroots level. We contend that the many strong womxn and girls fighting for justice in their communities know what needs to be done but frequently lack necessary resources to achieve their goals. BWF works to amplify the voices of these womxn and girls. BWF raises money from an economically diverse base of donors to award grants and to develop programs that strengthen communities and help womxn and girls to develop the skills and confidence to organize, educate and lead in their communities.

BWF, with an annual budget of approximately $650,000, has a grantmaking budget of $220,000 in 2020. BWF leads and collaborates with other organizations to design and support specialized programming for womxn and girls. The organization is guided by a diverse Board of Directors of talented and committed womxn.

Position Summary
Reporting to the Board of Directors, the Executive Director oversees the management and operations of the Fund. They are responsible for consistent achievement of organizational mission, goals and financial results.
